

After racking up a ton of student debt, the last thing on the majority of young peoples' minds is the idea of launching a business and putting what little savings they have on the line.