) St. Paul, MN – Berger Allied moving was recently recognized by the American Moving & Storage Association (AMSA) as a ProMover. Launched in 2009, the consumer protection ProMover program certifies quality, professional movers and help clients avoid imposters known and "rouge operators" within the industry. Berger Allied was awarded the programs' easily-recognizable ProMover seal which stands for a set of basic, honest business principles.

Before Berger Allied was recognized as a ProMover, the AMSA screened for any felony convictions of the company's owners, officers or majority stockholders regarding matters over which the Federal Motor Carrier Safety Administration (FMCSA), the Surface Transportation Board (STB) or any state consumer protection agency has jurisdiction. Berger Allies also had to provide certification of company ownership with the appropriate state corporation commission and a review of the website for improper advertising. ProMovers are also required to have a "satisfactory" or better rating by the Better Business Bureau - Berger Allied plus boasts an A+ rating.

As a ProMover, Berger Allied reviews will be evaluated annually to make sure the company continues to subscribe to AMSA's program requirements of providing professional and reliable services. The ProMover program also provides clients with information and assistance with everything from finding a mover, to getting an estimate and packing tips, to understanding valuation. This distinction is nationally recognized, industry-wide standards of conduct for professional movers.

The company provides local, long distance and international moving services for residential customers, businesses and government agencies. Berger Allied operates 16 full-service locations in Atlanta, Charlotte, Chicago, Cleveland, Dallas, Los Angeles, Phoenix as well as other major cities and has access to one of the largest moving networks in the world, so clients can expect to find a trust-worthy, pre-approved mover almost anywhere in the country.
