Today we deal with over 25 major department stores and catalog companies in the United States," said a spokesperson for JD Closeouts. "We can offer the best prices available for closeouts, department store returns, and surplus product."

What are closeout toys? Closeouts are basically extra product from the previous season's production. Items need to be moved to make room for new models and can include products from canceled orders or reduced inventory. Overrun or Overstock items means that more product was made than necessary. Store Returns or Salvage Merchandise are products that were returned, opened or received in store damage. Surplus merchandise includes items that still have value but can no longer be sold for full price. Overall, the products are still usually in great shape and can add much to a vendor's inventory list.

JD Closeouts' toy list is huge. Remote control cars and planes, board games, outdoor activity sets, kids' electronics and dollhouses are available. Name brand products include: V-tech, Nerf, Baby Einstein, Star Wars, Little Tikes, Fisher-Price, and Dora the Explorer, just to name a few. Call about mixed variety loads or specific item pallets, all from major department stores.
