

Atlanta Accounting and Taxation Group has launched an informative website packed with financial instruction and tools to help clients with a range of services. (PRLEAP.COM) Understanding that the internet is a powerful resource for users seeking tax filing, tax planning, and financial management information, Atlanta Accounting and Taxation Group has launched an informative website packed with financial instruction and tools to help clients with a range of services.

In addition to a virtual library of information, managing partner, Adrian Mulko said the website comes with technology that can also be used to better serve clients. For example, through the website's secure portal, clients can send their secure documents and paperwork directly to their Atlanta CPA or tax accountant. The firm can also host clients' financial files, which means they can be kept secure while the firm works with them and can be accessed by the client at any time.

"We designed our website specifically with our clients in mind. The technology and information makes our job easier, and allows us to serve our clients in ways that we previously couldn't," Mulko said. "We also hope the financial information provides another layer of service to our community, because whether you're a business owner looking to grow your business, or an individual looking for a better tax strategy for next year, there's something on our website for you.

The website possesses interactive attributes including a financial calculator and a free tax organizer to help clients make better informed decisions about tax processing and financial planning. Current and prospective clients now have access to investment strategy guides, tax strategies for business owners and individuals, IRS forms and publications, and other informative content when they visit the website. Some of the services offered by Atlanta Accounting and Taxation Group include:

Tax Preparation and Tax Planning Small Business Accounting Payroll Processing and Quick Books Services

"Our website can be a great resource both during and after tax time. There are tools to help you with tax preparation and planning, and tools to help you with investment strategies. It's a well-rounded complete financial package and we are looking forward to seeing our clients and web visitors grow their wealth because of it," Mulko said.
