

Avoid Payment Processing Hikes with Leap Payments

Written by Australian Business

(PRLEAP.COM) May 13, 2014 - Agoura Hills, CA – While other credit card processing companies are raising rates on their merchant clients, Leap Payments is holding the line, keeping rates low to keep clients happy.

Payment processing companies charge their clients a fee for each transaction as compensation for their services. Merchants accepting credit cards also pay fees to the credit card companies. Typically, both fees are set by charging a fixed rate plus a percentage of the total transaction.

In recent weeks, several payment processing companies have sent out letters to their clients informing them of a rate increase or other fee hikes on their merchant processing services. These fee adjustments are driven by changes the credit card companies routinely make to the structure of their fees. The credit card companies make these changes twice per year – in April and October.

Although many of its competitors are increasing fees for clients, Leap Payments will not be increasing rates. Leap Payments is committed to keeping its fee structure low, allowing clients to avoid charging convenience fees or higher prices. Rather than presenting fee increases to its clients, the leadership at Leap Payments would prefer to grow profits by growing the company's customer base.

In today's economy, margins are tight, and unnecessary expenses, such as merchant processing services rate increases, can take a big bite out of merchant profits, particularly those of small businesses. Leap Payments can help keep payment processing costs low, providing a dependable, affordable solution.
