) July 1, 2014 - As Google continually updates its search engine algorithms to favor user friendly websites, many companies and small businesses are seeing a sharp decline in web traffic. Over the past few years, Google has completely changed the way that its search engines work, now favoring high quality content over keyword and link density.

Despite these changes, Eyeflow Internet Marketing of Pittsburgh, Pa has survived, changing their SEO style to stay on top of Google's algorithm changes while helping failing and penalized sites recover. The SEO experts at Eyeflow provide in-depth analysis, searching the inner workings and structure of your entire website to pinpoint problem areas and repair your site according to Google's Penguin and Panda updates.

Can't find your site within Google search engine results? Experiencing a decrease in traffic? Suffering from a drop in keyword rankings? These are all signs that your site may be experiencing the effects of a google penalty. The dedicated staff at Eyeflow fully commits themselves to helping your site recover, providing a completely manual review of your site to make sure that no details within your page go overlooked.

After determining whether your website is suffering from penalties from either Google's Penguin or Panda updates, the team at Eyeflow creates a strategy to boost your site back into search engine rankings. With Penguin penalties, Eyeflow will assess your site's link profile, removing link networks, spam and other unnatural links from your site. To combat Panda penalties, a content strength audit will help grade your website for user friendliness and quality, pinpointing problem areas and outlining a path to improvement through new content opportunities.

With over 13 years of internet marketing experience and 12 awards, you can rest easy knowing that your website will be constantly monitored by the capable hands of Eyeflow Internet Marketing.
