

Disruptive Technology Key to Growth for Manufacturers in Competitive Markets

Written by Business News

As the manufacturing sector continues to grow, more companies are looking for ways to gain an advantage in their respective markets. One way companies are doing that is through the development of disruptive technology. In an interview on the premier of "Manufacturers Corner," Roy Paulson of Paulson Manufacturing, says that disruptive technology seeks to meet the future needs of the end user; in other words, products designed to solve problems customers don't even know they have yet.