

(PRLEAP.COM) "Cajun Flight," a new book Capt. Bob Fore, Ret., has been released by RoseDog Books.

"Cajun Flight" is a novel that graphically depicts the fiasco of the Vietnam War. The credibility of the Johnson Administration decayed into chaos in March of 1968, as a result of the Tet Offensive and the gore of Khe Sanh. Desperate to retain its position of power, the Administration ordered a CIA-programmed bombing raid, coded "Quickstop," to kill Ho Chi Minh.

The Agency handpicked elite Marine Corps aviators to deliver the predecessor of Desert Storm's ultra-sophisticated weaponry via the F-4 Phantom II.

The exquisite classic airline stewardess, Jill, was Brad's much needed companion. From their intense passionate moments to their exhilarating escapades, together they shared the events of the war and the duties of a Marine: both at war and play.

Accompany these men as they perform in combat, court the ladies, convey their opinions of the war, and render answers as to its sponsors.

About the Author: Capt. Bob Fore, Ret. was born in Lakeland, Florida, on September 1, 1938. He graduated from Lakeland High School in June 1958. He attended Marion Military Institute, graduating with an association in Arts and the rank of Company Commander. Upon graduation from Marion Military Institute, he attended The University of Florida, graduating in August 1960.

After Bob's schooling, he entered the United States Marine Corps as a Second Lieutenant. He obtained his flight wings and served as a fighter pilot for four years.

In November of 1964 Bob returned to his hometown. He worked with the family-owned business, Shell Oil Jobbership through his youth. He then married and started a family of two wonderful boys. Through his middle years he built three mobile home parks and a restaurant, which is still open and doing well. Bob's hobbies are hunting, fishing, and enjoying his family.
