(PRLEAP.COM) March 25, 2014 - Berlin based duo Re:boot, comprised of Denis and Kiro, are excited to announce the release of their debut single "Century." The song is a collaboration with Lena Katina of the scandalous, multi-platinum selling Russian duo t.A.T.u. who are best known for their controversial, chart topping singles "All The Things She Said" and "Not Gonna Get Us." "Century" can be heard online at the official website, WeAreReboot.com .

Produced and written by The Euroz (Julia Volkova, Big Bang and Mohombi), the passionate, yearning vocals soar vigorously across the infectious chorus of this Europop anthem. Complete with thundering bass line and a towering breakdown with an undercurrent of raw, grinding synths, it's impossible not to identify with their emotions. JosepVinaixa.com premiered the song stating that "Century" has "unprecedented musical atmosphere" with a "fusion of melodies, mixing pop, dance, electronic and dubstep with resonant vocals."

To lead in to the release of "Century", Re:boot have released a thrilling three part short-series which can also be seen on WeAreReboot.com . The first video finds both Denis and Kiro separated and trapped in unknown surroundings as the second and third videos explore the themes of isolation and unity.

"When we first heard "Century" we knew we needed to ask Lena to feature" says Kiro, "the lyrics were just so fitting for all of us and considering how Kiro and I met, it was simply a dream to have Lena collaborate with us on this track" adds Denis. Lena states, "I simply love the song."
