As recent news has illustrated, the assistance of a personal injury and wrongful death lawyer may be called upon at any time. While the tragic shooting at a Navy Yard in Washington D.C. made headlines around the globe, a less publicized, but no less heart-breaking event occurred on the Marine base at Twentynine Palms, a small desert town located about 130 miles east of Los Angeles. The L.A. Times reports that a training accident on the base claimed the life of Corporal Nicholas Sell, a 21-year-old from Eagle Point, Oregon. Sell died of burn injuries suffered when an amphibious assault vehicle caught fire Monday. Four others were also injured, and while three of the four were treated and released from the base hospital, as of September 18th, the fourth is still hospitalized in stable condition at Arrowhead Medical Center.

In a Facebook post, Sell's aunt Becky Sell Carreon Brennan described the family's grieving. "We are really struggling with how he died," she wrote. Brennan continued, stating that Sell "was just a kid who grew up in southern Oregon
