(PRLEAP.COM) London, UK - Hydra's VP of Marketing, Manfredi Bargioni, was recently interviewed for CIO magazine. The interview and article showed how Hydra supports businesses through project management software and systems, demonstrating the importance of the work Hydra is doing.

Offering resource management software and project management tools, Hydra allows companies to maximize their resources and get an investment return quickly. In the interview for CIO magazine, Bargioni discussed how using online project management tools can help companies to analyze what has been done and still needs to be done, as well as looking at work distribution and keeping track of what needs to be documented. Additionally, Bargioni stated that companies have seen a reduction in travel expenses, since Hydra's software is able to better track and delegate resources effectively. Those online tools can also be scaled to meet the needs of a variety of business customers, as stated by a company spokesperson: "Scalability lets you adjust our software to fit the specific needs of your operation, while fast and easy implementation and use mean that you can start enjoying the benefits of our business management software in just one week." CIO's interview demonstrated just how useful project management software implementation can be, regardless of how big or small a company is.

Hydra's services are exceptionally flexible, providing portfolio management that gives customers personalized reports and specific capacity planning. In addition, the company provides a Project Automation system that pulls together several aspects of a company's managing tasks into one online management tool. Used by organizations worldwide, the company has some of the best online project management software for streamlining business.
